

Please join us for

The Story of English: Including When It Wasn't English at All

John McWhorter
Columbia University

Monday, March 16
4:00 pm
Brown Hall 118

John McWhorter received his Ph.D. in Linguistics from Stanford University. He is currently teaching in the English Department at Columbia University. His research interests include creole languages, language contact, and language change. He is the author of several books, including Our Magnificent Bastard Tongue: The Untold Story of English and The Language Hoax: Why the World Looks the Same in Any Language.

Thanks to the following departments and programs for co-sponsoring this colloquium:

African and African-American Studies Program
English Department
Linguistics Program
Psychology Department
Philosophy-Neuroscience-Psychology Program
Sociology Department